I have been working with Patrick Spike for my Website design and programming for five years now. I have yet to work with someone who in the first try gets exactly what I want. He not only “gets it”, he has ideas and suggestions for my site that have been invaluable. For instance, showing how I can simplify the organization of my site pages for greater impact and ease of use. I find many people you hire may do a good job at carrying out your wishes but they aren’t invested enough to explain other better options.

He is realistic about the time it will take him to complete a project. I can count on him. I can also count on him to patiently explain the complexities of website design so that I can understand enough to ask questions or share ideas. As a novice with minimal experience in Web Speak I do not feel intimidated. Spike can eventually understand my clumsy computer talk! He is very patient.

Despite being a novice, he has effectively shown me how to log on to Weebly and alter my own website. This is important because I want a blog I can write in daily and I have photos I want to add on a weekly basis. I want to engage future clients with my site. It is an unbelievable asset to update my website whenever I want.

In this new business environment where your business can only be as good as your social media presence or website it is a huge advantage to have such an ally by your side. Spike understands all of it and how to think about social media sites and which ones to use for your business. He has taken all the confusion away and helped me with a clear plan. Simply put, thanks to Spike, I am very proud of my online presence!
